The Insurrectos to-day did honor to the memory of Colonel Tamborel, the Federal leader, who was killed during the fighting, by escorting his body to the cemetery on the bare hilliside and sounding taps over the grave.

With a troop of insurrecto cavairy as an escort, and followed by a firing squad on foot, the body of the dead Federal chief, laid on a stretcher in a dilapidated ohe-horse express wagon, and covered with nothing but a white sheet, was carried past insurrecto headquarters, then down the narrow streets of the little city to the cometery. At the head of the procession was a member of Colonel Tamborel's staff, who was given back his rifle for his last ride with his dead chief.

were to the military commanders to execute neutrality laws as they understood hem.

Actually there was no real question efore the departments after the legal divisor of the insurrectionary agent are had been told by the Treasury pepartment that the trade relations between El Paso and Juarus might proceed as heretotore. Thus, at least, took implies and merchandise might be arried across the line, according to be usual practice. No attempt was nade to decide as to admission of arms, as that queston had not heen raised. Troughly it will not be until an attempt its actually made to carry an invoice of arms and ammunition through he American custom house.

In answer to complaints to the War Department of the severe measures adopted by the American military commanders to prevent shipping supplies across the line, as well as crossing of non-combatants, Colonel Stewer's action at El Paso was upheld as fully within his instructions. He had required only that all supplies for Juarez he cleared through the El Paso custom house, as in normal times. Major-General Wood ordered military commanders to permit free passage across the international line of all persons, Americans or Mexicans, without arms and not carrying supplies.

A negro brakeman of the Atlantic Coast Line Rallroad narrowly escaped death yesterday in the switching yards of the American Tobacco Company's new warehouse plant on Maury Street, when a box car of a short train was deralled and hurled him from the top. The train, composed of a switching engine and two box cars of tobacco, did not have up speed enough to work much damage after it left the rails. For a minute after leaving the track it looked as if the heavy car would topple over on the brakeman A negro brakeman of the Atlantic would topple over on the brakeman where he lay, a few yards from the track, but the balance was maintain-
